HESE are the homes that have four porches, where comparative values elsewhere enjoy but one or two porches-hardwood floors throughout, whereas other homes have but one floor in hardwood, or none-two fireplaces; where other homes have but one or none-choice of hot-water or hot-air heating system, whereas in other homes you have no choice.

They are of that vast building operation that includes over 350 homes built and sold. The fact that but two remain should demand your immediate consideration.

Have you taken the trouble (?)—if it can be called "trouble" for a person to take the time to inspect the homes that will turn their present RENT EXPENSE into a HOME-BUYING INVESTMENT?

Have you fully realized that you can really and truly buy one of these homes with the money you are wasting for rent—buy it on terms like this:

(After the First Cash Payment of $200)

Until the Purchase Price of $3,400 Is Paid

TINHESE New High View Homes are a marked improvement on an improved home, a home that up to the time of its construction had never been anywhere near equaled in value at the price. The fact that 46 of them sold while building and without any advertising speaks volumes.

Some of the improved features to be found in these new homes are a greater area of usable floor space throughout the entire house. This additional area of usable space is particularly noticeable in the kitchen and the double closet capacity given to the second floor. The fact that one of the bedrooms communicates directly with the bathroom and that each bedroom communicates with the adjoining chamber, in addition to doors that lead directly into the second-story hall, adds greatly to the desirability of the home. This additional space also permits of an unusually large linen closet on the second floor.

And the value of the home itself is greatly enhanced by the location—convenient to the city's business and shopping center (as near as Dupont Circle), 171 feet above Penn. Ave., and surrounded by more expensive
